THIS IS ME

Lum Wing Chee

An elephant shares about his life growing up in the savannah. Its childhood filled with memories of running around and playing with the other animals. The elephant has a best friend, a snake. When the elephant was younger, it was teased by the other elephants for having a shorter trunk than the rest. The snake would wrap around its short trunk, making it longer and unique. Over time, the snake helped the elephant to find confidence within itself, accepting the fact that it has a shorter trunk. The snake and elephant grew distant as time passed, but the elephant will always be grateful for that childhood friend.
